We sing songs of the brave heroism of the Maccabees, the courageous defiance of the Jewish leaders keeping at bay the creep of Hellenism, the expunging of paganism from the Temple and rededication of the heart of Judaism. We play dreidel and recall tales of Jewry learning Torah in secrecy, remembering Jewish freedom fighters hiding in caves, and the tidal wave of the Assyrian Greeks threatening the future of Judaism. In a modern American era, these tropes help encourage Jewish pride while surrounded by Christmas, and celebrate isolationism from majority culture as our historic redemptive path. As we bear witness to a new bloom of anti-Semitism in nearly every country around the world, we are reminded of the dark realities of Jewish belonging in a global landscape. And for many as we enter this Chanukah season, the narratives of Chanukah may encourage us to turn inward and away from the encroaching, and even threatening, darkness. But there is another story of Chanukah, perhaps the very story we need this year and at this season.

In northern Israel, near the Kineret, sit the ruins of the ancient synagogue of Hamat Tiverya. There, embedded in the floor, is a large and elaborate mosaic. As one might expect, viewers are greeted with the familiar depictions of a menorah, a Torah ark, a shofar, and a lulav and etrog. However, those are mere side decorations to the focal point of the site: the synagogue floor boasts a Greek zodiac, and at the center of it, King David depicted as the sun god Helios. Much has been written about why a pagan calendar and appropriated foreign god would be present in an early synagogue, but it is one of thousands of archaeological findings that show just how interwoven were the Jewish and Greco-Roman worlds.

We typically focus on the timing of Chanukah as a commemoration of the date the Maccabees purified the Temple. However, the timing was in fact a reaction to the timing of pagan worship. In the book of First Maccabees, we learn that when the Temple was regained by our ancestors, they chose to rededicate it on the anniversary of the day it was defiled by Antiochus and the Assyrian Greeks. However, many scholars believe Antiochus chose to use the Temple for pagan purposes on the 25th of Kislev for a reason. In the words of Dr. Louis Finkelstein, “Antiochus set the date for idolatrous worship not by a popular Jewish celebration, but by his own festivities...his purpose to superimpose the solstice festival on the Temple.”

On the shortest day of the year, the Greek world would hold a week of grand celebrations using torchlights and sacrifices to Helios, the unconquerable god of the sun, helping inspire his rebirth and ensuring a return of warmth and light. When our ancestors rededicated the Temple and set Chanukah as an eternal Festival of Light for the Jewish people, they also appropriated this pagan day and placed it into the pantheon of Jewish sacred days.

The other story of Chanukah, with gratitude to the Assyrian-Greeks, we Judaized a pagan holiday and gained the image of celebrating light in the face of darkness. What lurks beneath our more popular tales of Chanukah as a triumphant opposition to assimilation may indeed be the opposite message; the very heart of Chanukah may be the Jewish endeavor to be enmeshed with a larger world.

In 1966, the late Chancellor of the Jewish Theological Seminary, Gerson D. Cohen, delivered a commencement address with the provocative title, The Blessing of Assimilation in Jewish History. In it he argued that Judaism has thrived most when the barriers with the outside world have been lowest, and Jews have adopted the best of surrounding culture and used it to revitalize Judaism itself. As David Ruderman of the University of Pennsylvania argues in his recent book Early Modern Jewry, there exists a causal relationship between Jewish mobility and cultural production. We arrive in a new place, we appreciate and absorb the blessings of that world, and we are rendered a stronger Jewish community because of that encounter.

Ours is a tradition of the most ancient roots that has grown and adapted throughout ages and geographies. At a season when we feel the sharp bite of winter, our inclination may be to insulate ourselves from the world beyond. At a time when we feel the all too familiar cut of swastika and hate, our impulse may be to let fear isolate us. In the Talmud, one of the only early requirements for the celebration of Chanukah is the placement of the Chanukiah – it must be placed in a window or doorway that can be easily seen by passersby. During these eight days of festivities, we are enjoined to claim our identity as Jews, and to send light out into the world.

At the same time, however, we should know this very act and ritual, one that has burned brightly for two millennia, is a blessing gained by letting in the outside world. In this comes a challenge—may we be generous enough to pour forth light even into an often harsh and darkened world, and may we also be courageous enough to let the light of the wider world within our homes and hearts.

Join us as we create light and celebrate community at our festive Erev Shabbat Chanukah service and annual Latke Party on Friday, December 15. As we bring generosity and gift-giving into our own homes, may this season ignite in us the urgency to extend it as well, beyond our walls. Inside this Chronicle, you’ll find ways to bring light to the world during our Festival of Light! Micah, Ayalah, Jonah, and I wish you a meaningful Chanukah. May the many stories of this season inspire us to offer gratitude for the light given by others, even as we bear the torch of bringing light out to the world.

HEARTFELT GRATITUDE
Thank you so much for all your kind wishes, notes, contributions and kindness in memory of our beloved Marv/Mike Gellman. We are so very blessed to be a part of this sacred community and your love is elevating us during this most difficult time.

With so much love, gratitude, and appreciation, Cantor Rebecca Garfein, Max, Jacob, and family
To all our new members, I wish you a very warm welcome. Perhaps you joined our community because your children are newly enrolled in RSS or the Religious School, or you just moved to the Upper West Side, or maybe you were introduced by friends. We are excited to have you as part of our Congregation Rodeph Sholom family.

Here at CRS you have the opportunity to build connections and relationships. We hope you will consider participating in Minyan, the new initiative that makes it easier for you to do just that (see Page 6). Our famous Chanukah Latke Party offers the perfect way to mingle and get to know your new community (see Page 3). And year-round, our inclusive worship services on Erev Shabbat, holidays, and festivals are joyful, warm, and filled with music.

Adult Programming celebrates our Jewish heritage with a variety of inspiring subjects. In January alone, we have evenings with Marjorie Ingall, author of The Jewish Mother: Mamaleh Knows Best; ceramicist and designer Jonathan Adler and his partner Simon Doonan, fashion world staple; Vine and Fig Tree, an opportunity to sample the food and wine of Israel; and a study session on contemporary Israeli and Palestinian poetry (see Page 4).

You are vital to our community's growth and well-being. I welcome your participation and encourage you to get involved in the many spiritual, learning, and community service opportunities here. Please feel free to reach out to me any time at bzakin@crsny.org. I look forward to getting to know you – together, let's make your experience at Rodeph Sholom rewarding and meaningful.

FROM THE PRESIDENT AT CHANUKAH

Martin Flumenbaum

When I spoke to the congregation on Yom Kippur, I emphasized that one of the principal ways for us to repair the world is to invest in this synagogue, and in this community. We cannot control most of the chaos and disorder in this world. We cannot control earthquakes, hurricanes, or even Washington’s political dysfunction. But we can control what we do here in this synagogue and for this community and thus, each of us can begin to repair the world, one person, one family at a time right here.

This fall, our congregation agreed to sponsor and to participate in the resettlement of a legally admitted refugee family. This will become one of the most important social action initiatives of this Congregation and I urge as many of you as possible to participate in this project. Janie Roher and Claudia Wagner, two fabulous members of our congregation, are spearheading this effort as part of our response to the devastating refugee crisis that plagues so many throughout the world. As Jews, we know firsthand the horrors of being refugees, of fleeing persecution, and of violence. And we also know firsthand what happens when countries are complacent – or worse – in the face of such horrors. As Rabbi Levine reminded us in his Yom Kippur sermon, our values and our Torah command us to “welcome the stranger.”

There is no better time to undertake this initiative than Chanukah, which starts in just a few days. At its core, Chanukah embraces life—the victory of courage over oppression and the triumph of light over darkness. More than 22 centuries ago, Judea was ruled by the Seleucids, Syrian-Greeks, who sought to dominate the people of Israel. Judaism was outlawed and the Second Temple in Jerusalem was looted. Against all odds, a small group of Jewish warriors, the Maccabees, led a successful revolt against a much stronger army, drove the Greeks from the land, and reclaimed the Holy Temple in Jerusalem.

When the Maccabees sought to rededicate the Temple, they found only enough oil to last one night. But they lit the menorah anyway and miraculously the oil lasted eight days, enough time for new oil to be obtained and purified for use at the Temple.

As Chanukah teaches us, a small band of Jewish warriors can make a profound difference. It is now our turn to become modern day Maccabees here at Rodeph Sholom, lighting the way for those who so desperately need our help. When we work together, the collective light will shine so much brighter and so much longer than any of us individually could contemplate.

As we light the Chanukah candles this year with our families, let us continue to think of new ways to light the path for those who require our assistance. Ruth and I and our family wish you a joyous Chanukah and a happy, healthy, and luminous 2018.

PROJECT KEHILA’S HURRICANE RELIEF

Project Kehila, our congregation’s natural disaster response team, was founded in 2005 after Hurricane Katrina devastated New Orleans. We then lent our support to relief efforts after Hurricane Sandy. We have reconvened to respond to the damage caused by Hurricanes Harvey, Irma, and Maria, and the resulting wreckage they left behind in Texas, Florida, Puerto Rico, and the Caribbean. Rebuilding will be a long road. Information is at rodephsholom.org/project-kehila-to-address-2017-hurricanes.

Remembering Marv Gellman

These four words embodied Marv “Mike” Gellman’s outlook on life, noted Rabbi Levine at the memorial service. Marv had a passion for life, a big heart, and enormous strength in the face of adversity. And as Rabbi pointed out, he understood life’s uncertainties and believed that with optimism life’s problems can be solved.

Marv approached life with a smile on his face, a sefer panim yafot, a sunny disposition, and a kind word to all, leaving us with a potent lesson. Like Marv, may we be gracious and considerate of others’ perspectives; and greet every moment with light, with hope.

Together with our beloved Cantor Rebecca and their two boys, Max and Jake, we, too, have lost a special family member. Marv, your love for our community will always be remembered. Your Rodeph Sholom family will miss your good humor and ready smile.

IF YOU BUILD IT, THEY WILL COME: MY HIGH HOLY DAYS IN PARIS

Sandy Abramson

First the French police searched the prayer house with their dogs. Satisfied for our security, we could begin setting up. It was the afternoon of Erev Rosh Hashanah 2017 and I had volunteered to help a reform (Liberal) synagogue in Paris prepare for the High Holy Days. What unfolded next and again at Yom Kippur was rather miraculous and totally biblical!

My husband, Steve, and I had attended services many times at Kehillat Gesher, a small synagogue in the 17th arrondissement in Paris. Rabbi Tom Cohen, originally from Portland, OR, founded this French and English-speaking synagogue 25 years ago and created a tri-lingual siddur and machzor (see left). The sanctuary, a room the size of our Hahn Chapel, could not accommodate its 170 families, so High Holy Day services were held in a church nearby. This meant bringing all of the synagogue’s necessary items to the church and back – twice.

As part of a corps of dedicated volunteers, my job was to help set up the bimah, essentially changing the church into a synagogue. “...And let them make me a sanctuary; that I may dwell among them. According to all that I show you, after the pattern of the Tabernacle ... so shall you make it.” (Sh’mot 25:1-9) I kept thinking of these words as my experienced coach showed me the ropes of bimah construction: we blew up beautiful white balloons to cover the Christian prayer on the archway; we hung tall curtains to hide the many crosses; and we set a long white table cloth (ironed on the spot!) to sanctify the surface upon which the collapsible reading lectern sat.

On Rosh Hashanah, I assisted. On Yom Kippur, I directed. Three of us set up the portable Ark, a wooden box with slats and curtain, and unpacked the three Torahs from their travel duffel bag and down quilt cocoon. Dressed in their High Holy Day finery, the Torahs and yads, along with candlesticks and goblet, were settled into their temporary home. The bimah was now ready for services.

Although I missed my beloved and familiar CRS, I won’t soon forget the elegant simplicity of this synagogue and its traveling tabernacle.

WRJ HONORS SISTERHOOD

We are delighted to announce that our CRS Sisterhood received Women of Reform Judaism’s (WRJ) Gold 2018 Or Ami “Light of My People” Award for their outstanding work with the Days for Girls project. They will be honored at the WRJ Fried Leadership Conference, March 1–4 in Nashville. Beth Rubin and Hilary Steinman (who is also speaking on partnering with outside organizations) will accept the award. Days for Girls, a grassroots non-profit, makes feminine hygiene kits for women and girls living in poverty who would otherwise miss work and school days because they can’t afford to properly take care of themselves. Sisterhood has made this program a stirring success and model for other synagogues. WRJ values your commitment to the spirit of tikkun olam, sisterhood, and community. Your congregation couldn’t agree more. Mazel tov and yasher koach!

COUNSELING & SUPPORT SERVICE

Ruth Kobrin, LMSW, CRS’s resident social worker, wears many hats. She helps us to deal with the many challenges, problems, and crises we may face. Providing counseling and support services, she also offers information and assistance to those needing health care, facility, or assisted living situation. And she reaches out and visits our congregation’s lonely, ill, and housebound. If you need help, do not hesitate to call – it’s confidential.

Contact Ruth for an appointment: 646.454.3180 or rkobrin@crsnyc.org.

(Ruth Kobrin, LMSW is Senior Social Worker at Congregation Rodeph Sholom, part of the Partners in Caring program of UJA-Federation of New York.)
DEVELOPMENT | Lyndsie Levine

Hillel the Elder tells us, “A single candle can light a thousand more without diminishing itself.” It seems the perfect metaphor for this Chanukah season. This is a time of year filled with celebration, joy, and gratitude for the gifts in our lives. It is also an important time to remember what we can do to give of ourselves – how can we light a thousand more candles? Or even just one?

I am always inspired to see the ways that members of our community give back to others. For some, it is through supporting our Food Drive, a profoundly important fundraiser that honors our congregation’s duty to feed the hungry within our very own community. Others volunteer their nights in our Homeless Shelter, fulfilling yet another commandment to provide shelter to those in need. Hundreds of people of all ages participated in our annual Mitzvah Weekend, performing mitzvot like cleaning up Central Park, visiting seniors, and giving blood. Others make calls and visits to those who are sick or need cheering up through our Caring Community. And many support the entirety of our congregation with a gift to the Yom Kippur Appeal.

The Yom Kippur Appeal does so much for CRS – what would it mean to our community if we did not have your support? We would not be able to offer the wide array of programs and worship experiences for all ages and stages that we do now. We could not maintain our aging building, which is beautiful and historic, but requires constant care. We would not be able to support our dedicated team of clergy who are there for us in so many moments that shape our lives, nor could we retain the remarkable educators who are helping us teach our Jewish values to the next generation. What about new and innovative programs like our small groups initiative, Minyan? Or how about providing dues assistance and Religious School scholarships to any family in need? We couldn’t do any of this without you.

I hope you will join me in supporting CRS with your tzedakah as this calendar year comes to a close. If you have never contributed to the YKA, I hope that you will consider participating – your contribution, at any level, will make a difference. If you have supported the Appeal in the past, I hope we can count on your generosity again this year. And if you are able to consider increasing your support, even by 5-10%, it would be deeply appreciated.

We are each of us a candle, capable of lighting another without being diminished. Thank you for all the ways you share your light with our community.

Wishing you good health and happiness in 2018!

Making your gift: If you would like your donation to qualify for a 2017 tax credit, please be sure to make an online gift by midnight on December 31 or send in a check before the end of the year. Any mail postmarked by December 31 will qualify. Please note that the synagogue offices will be closed from December 25 through January 1, so if you would like to make a gift of appreciated stock, please be sure to leave enough time for the transaction to be completed during this busy season. You can call the Development Office at 646.454.3052 for transfer instructions.

UNDERWRITING OPPORTUNITIES

Gifts that partially or fully underwrite large projects at CRS are a wonderful way to make a tangible impact in our community. Here are two immediate opportunities:

- Small Torah A small, lightweight Torah is needed to supplement our weekly children’s programming and b’nai mitzvah services. This is a wonderful opportunity to honor a loved one and give the gift of Torah to the next generation. A gift of $50,000 will cover the full cost of a new Torah.
- Sukkah Lattice The lattice that covers our beautiful Sukkah is in need of replacement. A gift of $1,000 will fully underwrite the new materials.

Please contact Lyndsie Levine, Director of Development, at 646.454.3050 or llevine@crsny.org to discuss how you can help.

CRS AND CITY HARVEST FIGHT HUNGER

Yvette Perry

Our CRS community, this wonderful congregation, has the capacity to be enormously generous. Thanks to you, on Yom Kippur morning we filled this year’s City Harvest trucks with 12,715 pounds of food. That exceeded last year’s donation by 1,780 pounds! Our goodwill enables them to deliver food to its 500 community food programs in New York City.

We can be very proud of our longstanding association with this incredible organization. In addition to their work for our own City’s hungry citizens, City Harvest delivered water and meal boxes to Puerto Rico, Texas, and Florida, all devastated by Hurricanes Maria, Harvey, and Irma.

Nancy Mendelow, who we lost in the past year, and her husband Steve (z”l) made an additional contribution to our Yom Kippur Food Drive each year. We remember their love for Rodeph Sholom and the compassion they had for feeding those who need it most.

Hunger does not end when Yom Kippur finishes. Please support the CRS Food Drive so we may continue to provide hope and help throughout the year.

THE FOOD DRIVE NEEDS YOUR SUPPORT MORE THAN EVER | Joanna Kapner

Twice a year the Social Action Committee asks for donations to the Rodeph Sholom Food Drive. Despite an improved economy, the need for food assistance keeps growing while government support declines. Here in the nation’s wealthiest city, food banks and soup kitchens struggle to fill their shelves. The Rodeph Sholom Food Drive supports our own Project Moving On, as well as a number of West Side programs that strive to ease the pain of hunger and poverty. But we can only succeed with your help. Please consider sending a check to Congregation Rodeph Sholom, 7 West 83rd Street, New York, NY 10024, with “Food Drive” on the memo line. Or you can donate online at rodephsholom.org/social-action/crs-food-drive.

MINYAN Creating sacred community, where each person counts.

There are many minyanim to choose from. Take a look at the offerings – there’s sure to be one (or more!) where you can enjoy camaraderie, learn facets of Judaism and its history, discover new things, and share experiences. Try it, you just might find the community you are looking for.

Weinstein, Puerto Rico, and the Boy Scouts.

We live for the future instead of actually just living.”

Teenage anxiety, N.F.L. kneeling, birth control, Columbus Day, Harvey Weinstein, Puerto Rico, and the Boy Scouts.” Of note from this list is that “teenage anxiety” no longer refers to the worries of teens in the past, such things as friendships, cliques, romantic crushes, or blemishes.

From a young age, our children start feeling the pressure of their future. Middle school is no longer about navigating the awkward pre-teen years. It’s about scoring high in classes and on standardized tests so that they can get into the top high schools. Once they are in that top high school, it becomes a race to get into the best college. One of the letters, authored by a sixteen year old and titled “Letting Teenagers Have a Life” stated, “Why do we have to think about our adult life every day as a teenager? I can’t sleep at night; all I do is stay up thinking and planning. Why are more American teenagers than ever suffering from severe anxiety? It’s because we get it into our heads that school is what’s going to make things better; we live for the future instead of actually just living.”

In early October, the New York Times invited high school students to submit a Letter to the Editor responding to a news article, editorial, or Op-Ed essay from that week, and that the best entries would be published the following week. The most popular themes of the letters were, “…Donald Trump, teenage anxiety, N.F.L. kneeling, birth control, Columbus Day, Harvey Weinstein, Puerto Rico, and the Boy Scouts.”

We understand how important it is for our children and teens to get into good high schools and do well so that they can attend good universities. I know this on a personal level now as a parent helping my eighth grade son get into high school. I also know as an educator, and someone who has worked with teens at Rodeph Sholom for the past eighteen years, that now, more than ever, what we offer teens is what they need most. A safe space to be themselves, where they can let their guard down, express frustrations and thoughts of failure, where they know they have trusted adults to talk to who aren’t connected to their school, who aren’t their parents. We offer programs that will teach teens skills they will need as they move through their education and development into adulthood, including those that help build a solid resume. But at the same time we also help because we care about our teens and listen to them without judgment.

So once the fall rush is over for the eighth graders applying to high school and the ninth graders adjusting to new schools, we invite all of our teens to come back to CRS. Whatever their interest is, we have it here: classroom experiences, paid internships, mitzvah work, trips to NOLA, DC, Berlin, social outings, and more! Connect your teen to a supportive environment where they can “actually just live” and enjoy the present.

RECIPE FOR APPLE LATKES

(WRJ Centennial Cookbook)

Ingredients:
- 2 eggs
- 3 tablespoons sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/3 cup water
- 3 cups chopped cooking apples
- 3/4 cup sifted all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
- Oil for frying

Topping:
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/2 cup sugar

Directions:
1. Beat eggs until foamy. Add sugar, salt, cinnamon, and water and mix until well blended.
2. Add apples, flour, and lemon peel and mix well.
3. Heat enough oil in bottom of pan to cover. For each latke drop about 1/4 cup of batter into hot oil. Flatten slightly and fry on each side until golden brown. Add oil as needed.
4. Drain on paper towels.
5. Combine sugar and cinnamon topping and sprinkle over hot latkes.

Rodeph Sholom School

Admissions season in NYC for the 2018-19 school year is well underway. We are thrilled to have so many families, congregants, and non-congregants applying to the Nursery as well as Kindergarten and above. At Rodeph Sholom School we believe that Jewish education exists not just for the sake of teaching Torah; Jewish education builds character and teaches children to be empowered contributing members of their community. Tours of Rodeph Sholom School are available by calling 646.438.8600 and applications can be found online at rodephsholomschool.org. Priority is given to all CRS members. Financial Aid is available to all families who qualify. We are just across the courtyard and we look forward to welcoming you to RSS!

“Darkness cannot drive out darkness; only light can do that. Hate cannot drive out hate; only love can do that.”

Rodeph Sholom, one of New York’s most distinguished Reform congregations, embodies a strong commitment to purposeful Jewish living and the pursuit of human dignity. Our congregation is a true community, excelling in meaningful worship, educational opportunity for all ages, social and tzedakah programs. We strive to be an extended family of people who care about each other and our community.

Founded in 1842 on the Lower East Side, Rodeph Sholom has always sought to blend the teachings of our Jewish heritage with the best lessons of modern culture. We are proud of our beautiful worship services, our commitment to social action, and our emphasis on Jewish education for people of all ages. Rodeph Sholom was the first Reform congregation to open a Jewish Day School. Our schools, like our congregation, are flourishing. Remaining true to our name which is Hebrew for “pursuer of peace,” Rodeph Sholom takes great pride in our history and is hard at work to fulfill the promise of our future.
